

which time it was set down for a peremptory hearing. This gives Foster another respite, and meantime the case is gradually passing out of public memory—the very point, doubtless, which Foster's counsel are striving to accomplish.

Commerce Between Canada and the United States.

The commercial relations between this country and the Dominion have been hitherto carried on upon an unsettled basis, giving satisfaction to neither side. The Canadians have argued that the consular and import charges in the United States were exorbitant, and prevented the development of the best interests of the two nations. American business men, on the other hand, have maintained that an illicit trade has been forced across the frontiers, and that while they have been endeavoring to cultivate friendly relations and trade with the Dominion on the same basis as the country compels in every other instance goods are brought in without paying duty, and hence the articles on which all the fees had been paid had to be disposed of at a proportionate loss. Yesterday the Canadian Board of Trade at Ottawa discussed the matter in the presence of various delegates from the United States. The same complaints were made, and the same explanations given, as in numerous other instances; but the only hope that remains of a settlement, such as will be acceptable to both sides, derives its inspiration from the resolve of the delegates to meet in Washington and endeavor to obtain from the present Congress a relief from import restrictions to such an extent as will permit of the development of the powerful mercantile interests befitting two neighboring and friendly nations.

THE CROTON WATER.—Under the last municipal regime sundry arrangements were made to add to the supply of water in Croton Lake by the purchase of property bordering on other water spaces. Whether or not these bargains were consummated is no matter of concern to the people of New York just at this time. But our citizens want to know what they may expect next summer, when the usual droughts affect the supply of water from the fountain-head. Comptroller Green, who seems to run the municipal machine, should be on the alert to see that a water famine does not occur in this city the coming summer.

NUHILUM IN CONGRESS.—The Senate was not in session yesterday, and the House frittered away several hours in talk over an Arkansas contested election case, just as if it was of the slightest importance to anybody but the claimants themselves whether the one or the other claimant shall represent the district, or whether the district or the State, or, indeed, any of the Southern States under the present regime there, were represented at all or not. The House should have rather had a holiday than so mispend the time.

A SIGNIFICANT VOTE.—The vote in the State Assembly to-day on the Comptroller's audit bill may be taken as pretty nearly a fair test of comparative strength of the Conkling and Fenton factions in the lower House. It does not look favorable for the former, and indicates that unless some compromise should be arrived at between the republican factions in New York, all legislation in regard to the city charter may go by the board. The democratic vote was divided.

KANSAS TO THE FRONT.—A Kansas newspaper publishes the names of nineteen members of that State Legislature charged with bribery and corruption in the election of a United States Senator last winter. Ten to nine if Mr. Tweed goes out West he goes to Kansas.

Personal Intelligence.
Congressman Oakes Ames, of Massachusetts, is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.
James O. Norton, of Chicago, is stopping at the Manhattan Hotel.
Colonel J. C. Smith, of Buffalo, is at the St. Nicholas Hotel.
Mr. W. H. Hughes, of Pennsylvania, is among the guests at the Grand Central Hotel.
Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hurlburt, of Mexico, yesterday arrived at the Grand Central Hotel.
Mr. J. C. Smith, of Buffalo, is at the St. Nicholas Hotel.
Colonel S. L. Harris, of Syracuse, is domiciled at the Grand Central Hotel.
H. H. Dodge, of Washington, is among the sojourners at the St. James Hotel.
Mariano Dominguez, of Mexico, is stopping at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.
B. Lippens, of Ghent, Belgium, is registered at the New York Hotel.
General G. W. Faltrey, of Philadelphia, is temporarily residing at the Albemarle Hotel.
Lieutenant H. V. Ellis, of London, last evening reached the Grand Central Hotel direct from the Plains. He brings with him several trophies of the chase.

NEW PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.
From D. Appleton & Co., "Nathalie," a tale, by Julia Kavanagh; "Mission Ridge and Lookout Mountain, with Pictures of Life in Camp and Field," by Benj. F. Taylor; "New Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism," by T. R. Huxley, L.D.S., F.R.S.
From T. B. Peterson & Co., Philadelphia—"Ten Thousand a Year," by Dr. Samuel C. Warren; "A Rent in a Cloud," by Charles Lever; "Aunt Patty's Scrap Bag," by Mrs. Lee Hentz.
From Harper & Brothers—"Physiology of the Soul and Instinct, as Distinguished from Materialism," by Martyn Paine, A. M., M. D., L.L.D.
From J. B. Ford & Co., "Mineral, Mills and Furnaces of the Pacific States and Territories: An Account of the Condition, Resources and Methods of the Mining and Metallurgical Industry in Those Regions, Chiefly Relating to the Precious Metals," by Foster W. Raymond, Ph.D.
From Charles Scribner & Co., "Addresses at the Inauguration of Professor Noah Porter, D. D., LL.D., as President of Yale College."
From J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia—"How Will it End?" a romance, by J. C. Hayward.
From Sidney E. Morse, Jr., & Co., "The New York Observer Year Book, for 1872."
Magazines: "The Overland Monthly and Good Health for January."

NAVAL ORDERS.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, 1872.
Lieutenant Commander A. T. Mahan has been detached from special duty connected with the hydrographic office and placed on waiting orders. Rear Admiral Alden relieved Rear Admiral Boggs at Valparaiso on the 30th of December, in command of the European fleet, the Wabash having arrived there on that day.

FRANCE.
President Thiers' Tariff Plan and Renewal of His Threat of Resignation.
Legislative Rejection of the Project for Taxing Raw Material.
The Tobacco Trade Monopoly Report—American Fame and Charity—The Bullion Supply.

PARIS, Jan. 19, 1872.
It is rumored that President Thiers threatens to resign if the Assembly rejects the new tariff tax on raw material.
THE ASSEMBLY REJECTS THE TARIFF PLAN.
In the National Assembly at a later hour of the day discussion was resumed upon the proposition of M. Poyet-Quertier, Minister of Finance, to impose a tax on raw material.
It soon became apparent that the opposition to the measure were in the majority, and finally the Assembly, by a vote of 376 against 307, adopted a resolution offered by Deputy Ferry, providing "that the government shall only resort to the taxation of raw materials when other taxes fail to produce sufficient resources to meet the expenses of the nation."
A committee of fifteen was appointed, who are in the meantime to make a thorough examination of the tariff.
CABINET MODIFICATION OR RESIGNATION.
There are rumors this evening of ministerial changes, in consequence of the vote of the Assembly.
M. Poyet-Quertier, it is reported, will retire from the Ministry of Finance, and will be succeeded by M. Cassimier Perier, the present Minister of the Interior.
M. Le Franc is mentioned as the successor of M. Perier.
THE TOBACCO MONOPOLY REPORT.
The report of the session of the tobacco monopoly to bankers and private parties to secure immediate payment of the war indemnity is contradicted.
Still later advice on the subject says the report that the French government is negotiating with foreign bankers to anticipate the payment of the war indemnity is pronounced false.
AMERICAN GLORY IN WAR, PEACE AND CHARITY.
The American Register of to-day says Minister Curtin has left St. Petersburg for Nice, to meet General Sherman and Minister Washburn.
J. Hancock Davis and other Americans connected with the General Board of Arbitration have taken office in the Rue de la Paix, and will remain here until the next meeting of the tribunal.
The American Charitable Society of Paris is to be organized.
THE FLOW OF BULLION.
The specie in the Bank of France has increased $3,500,000 francs during the week.

ENGLAND.
Outdoor Parliamentary Opinion of the Official Ability of the Cabinet.
LONDON, Jan. 19, 1872.
The Right Hon. Edward Horne, M. P., in an address to his constituents at Liskeard last night, took a gloomy view of the political prospect, and declared the present government unfit to deal with English questions.
Mr. Horne is a liberal in politics, but is not in office at present. He was a Treasury Lord in 1841, Chief Secretary for Ireland in 1850-51, has represented Corkmouth and Stroud in the House of Commons, and is at present member for Liskeard, to the representation of which he was elected in 1869. Out of government office he does not appear to abide in the consolation of his family motto, "Confido."
THE COTTON SUPPLY.
One thousand four hundred and one bales of American cotton were landed at Liverpool to-day.

GERMANY AND FRANCE.
Prussian Military Law Enforced in the French Hostaged Districts.
PARIS, Jan. 19, 1872.
The principal of the college at Vittel in France, who was arrested by the Germans on account of a hostile demonstration made by the students of the institution, has been condemned by a German court martial to three months' imprisonment.
The circumstance causes much uneasiness here.

FRANCE AND AUSTRIA.
Republican Demand for the Violation of the Right of Political Asylum.
PARIS, Jan. 19, 1872.
The French government has made a formal demand on Austria for the extradition of M. Desrozes, who was Gambetta's private secretary during the German war, and was subsequently connected with the Commune.

SPAIN.
Princely Honor and Political Association for Progress.
MADRID, Jan. 19, 1872.
Espartero has reconsidered his refusal of the title of Prince of Vergara, and has signified his acceptance of the honor offered him by the King.

POLITICAL ASSOCIATION.
A new political club, to be composed only of progressists, has been formed here, and already numbers four hundred members.

INDIA.
Marine Disaster and Loss of Life.
LONDON, Jan. 19, 1872.
A telegram from Bombay reports the loss of a vessel of Surat, with thirty-five natives on board, all of whom were drowned.

JAVA.
Floods and Farm Losses in the Island.
LONDON, Jan. 19, 1872.
Despatches from Batavia report heavy floods in the island of Java, which have done considerable damage to the crops.

DEEP SEA TELEGRAPHS.
The Projected New Line from Europe to America.
LONDON, Jan. 19, 1872.
Mr. Blochschmidt refuses information relative to the project of a new telegraph cable between England and America, direct to New York. The Maintenance and Construction Company and others, however, say the new line has no connection with the existing cables, though they think it future amalgamation.

WEST VIRGINIA.
The Sister State Refuses to be Debited with All the Debt Virginia Wishes to Saddle on Her.
WHEELING, Jan. 19, 1872.
The Western Virginia Commissioners have published a statement showing the amount and character of the Virginia debt prior to the war, and the manner in which this State proposes to settle with Virginia for her proportion of the debt. After crediting Virginia for amounts expended in our Territory for public improvements, bank stock, &c., and charging her with estimated interest in public buildings and various funds, they find the balance due Virginia about one million dollars. The public improvements of Virginia, which represent some thirty millions of her debt before the war, they say, are to be paid by the State of Virginia, and not by the sister State. Their language is: "That Virginia has the property and owes the debt which is repugnant."

EUROPEAN MARKETS.
LONDON, Jan. 19, 1872.
The following record will show the changes in the temperature for the past twenty-four hours, in comparison with the corresponding day of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudson's Pharmacy, Herald Building, corner of Ann street.
1871. 1872.
3 A. M. 35 30
6 A. M. 35 30
9 A. M. 35 30
12 M. 35 30
3 P. M. 35 30
6 P. M. 35 30
9 P. M. 35 30
Average temperature yesterday 35°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year 30°

THE WAR IN MEXICO.
Camargo Not Yet Captured by the Revolutionists—The Government to Take the Offensive.
TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.
MATAMOROS, Mexico, Jan. 19, 1872.
Valdez still holds Piedras Negras, although besieged by revolutionists.
The revolutionists have not captured Camargo, although outnumbering Cortina's troops.
A brig from Tampico arrived here last night with money and supplies for the government troops, who will now take the offensive.

MEXICAN INDIANS IN TEXAS.
Ranches Burned, Settlers Killed and Stock Driven Off.
BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 19, 1872.
Indians from Mexico are burning ranches, killing settlers and running off stock from Texas, between Laredo and Eagle Pass, and conveying the property to their camps on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.
CUBA.
The remains of Columbus to be placed inside a Grand Monument in a New Cemetery—The Officers of the Terror.
HAVANA, Jan. 19, 1872.
The new cemetery will receive the title of Columbus, and the remains of Columbus, which are now deposited in the cathedral, will be transferred to some future day to the new cemetery, and placed inside a grand monument to be erected to his memory.
The new set of officers for the United States monitor Terror have arrived. As the relief ship to take home the present officers failed to arrive, the Terror now has two sets of officers.

SALT LAKE SAINTS.
The Bill for the State Constitution Rejected and Amendments Demanded—Brigham Young and the Leaders Clinging to Polygamy—Attorney General to File a Bill.
SALT LAKE, Jan. 19, 1872.
The Council substitute for the House bill providing for a convention to frame a State constitution, together with a provision to send two delegates to the National Republican Convention, was finally defeated in the Council to-day, its fatal stupidity being finally clear to the common ignorance of the higher Chamber. The House bill was then amended to change the apportionment of the Delegates, passed and sent to the House, where it is likely to be concurred in.
The convention project is sure to pass unanimously, and Utah will present her State constitution to Congress within forty days.
Polygamy will not be surrendered if Brigham Young and the leaders can prevent it.
The people are opposed to the concession, and the ultras will carry the day, spite of Hooper and his politicians.
It is now thoroughly believed by the Gentiles that the United States Attorney Bates is unfaithful to the interests he was sent here to uphold. Recent developments have alienated his best political friends. The appointment of his successor is earnestly demanded by the non-Mormon portion of the people, as he has lost the confidence of officials and the people, and, therefore, destroyed his usefulness as a government official.

WEATHER REPORT.
WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19, 1872.
Synopsis for the last Twenty-four Hours.
The area of low barometer which was Thursday night center in Arkansas has moved northeastward to Lake Ontario. Snow is now reported from Michigan and Wisconsin, but rain has prevailed from the region and the lower lakes to the Gulf and Atlantic coasts. Cloudy and clearing weather are now reported south and west of Kentucky, with light northeast winds. Increasing southeasterly winds prevail on the Middle and East Atlantic coasts, but have veered to southwest from Virginia to Florida. The temperature has risen decidedly in the Southern, Middle, and Eastern States. It has fallen in the Gulf States.
The area of low barometer will probably move northeastward over New York and the St. Lawrence valley, with snow in Northern New England and Canada; a subsidiary disturbance pass northeast over the New England coast, with rain and brisk southeast winds to-night; cloudy and clearing weather prevail by Saturday afternoon from Pennsylvania to Maine; partially cloudy and clear weather prevail from Virginia and Iowa and southward; northerly winds, with cloudy weather, from Erie, north and westward. Dangerous winds are probable, especially on Lake Ontario. Brisk southeasterly winds veering to southwest from New Jersey to Massachusetts.
Supplementary Weather Report.
WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19, 1872.
Synopsis for the last Twenty-four Hours.
Snow fell last night in Buffalo, N. Y., Indianapolis, Ind., New York City, St. Louis, Port Dover and Port Stanley, Canada. Rain was reported from Cairo, Ill.; Vicksburg, Miss.; Memphis, Tenn.; New Orleans, La.; Pittsburg, Pa., and Shreveport, La. Brisk northeasterly winds prevailed in Cheyenne, W. T.; Galveston, Texas, and a heavy westerly gale upon the summit of Mount Washington. N. B. Snow was reported this morning at Cairo, Ill.; Cheyenne, W. T.; Cleveland, Ohio; Duluth, Minn.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Omaha, Neb.; St. Paul, Minn., and Toledo, Ohio. A westerly gale continued upon the summit of Mount Washington. N. H. It was snowing this evening in Toronto, Canada; Buffalo, N. Y.; Cheyenne, W. T.; Chicago; Davenport, Iowa; Detroit, Mich.; Duluth, Minn.; Eosabana, Grand Haven and Marquette, Mich.; Oswego and Rochester, N. Y.; Toledo, Ohio; and at Kingston, Port Dover and Port Stanley, Canada. Rain fell at Augusta, Ga.; Baltimore, Md.; Cleveland, Ohio; Lake City, Fla.; Milwaukee, Wis.; New York City, Norfolk, Va.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Punta Passa, Fla.; Savannah, Ga., and in this city. The temperature at Key West, Fla., was 76 degrees above and 66 degrees at San Diego, Cal. In this city it was 66 degrees.

THE RETURNING HUNTERS.
The Grand Ducal Party at Denver—Surrendering the Glories of the Golden City and Its Surrounding Delightful Scenery—The Journey Toward New Orleans.
DENVER, Col., Jan. 19, 1872.
The charming and wonderful Clear Creek canyon, which winds its way through the Rocky Mountains, has been the chief attraction to-day for the Duke Alexis and General Sheridan. Both the distinguished visitors and their accompanying suites and friends accepted of an invitation of the Colorado Central Railroad Company to visit the mines of the mountains, and left by a special train about noon. The journey by rail was terminated at Golden City, where the visitors were cordially received and liberally dined and wine at the Golden Hotel. Some two hours having been thus spent in the noisier city, the party were conveyed in carriages up the canyon for a distance of eight or ten miles. Extensive mines at this point were inspected, a few substantial refreshments partaken, and a jolly good time had generally.

A DEAD SECRET.
A Beautiful Girl of Eighteen Destroys Herself by a Shot from a Revolver.
NEW YORK, Friday—13 M.
Miss Isabella Titus killed herself on the Stairway of a Boarding House in West Twenty-fourth Street.
The Young Lady's Body Taken Home to Her Afflicted Mother in Massachusetts.
The convent of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart, situated on Jefferson avenue, between Beaubien and St. Antoine streets, Detroit, Mich., is one of the best known and most fashionable academies for the education of young ladies in the West. Madame Dufay is the Lady Superior, and to this convent are sent many girls of the Protestant faith by their parents, resident in different parts of the United States, to have their education finished.
About three years ago a young lady of fifteen years of age, named Miss Isabella Titus, having in her face all the indications of a kind, loving and affectionate disposition, and being quite remarkable for her personal beauty and waving hair, entered on her course of studies under the care and supervision of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. Miss Titus was born in Detroit, of a Protestant family, but her parents, who were wealthy and moved in good society, deemed it best to place her at the Sacred Heart, in order that she might become accomplished in all the elegant branches. Miss Titus won golden opinions by her docility, good humor and affectionate bearing toward her playmates and school-fellows, and she was much beloved by the ladies conducting the course of instruction in the convent.
The fair young pupil progressed rapidly in her studies, and became a good pianist as well as a ready scholar in all other branches of her education. As Miss Titus approached the critical period of womanhood, her sixteenth year, she was afflicted with nervous headaches and grievous pains all over her body, which at times caused her great anguish, and the doctors of the convent, ground cause and sadness would not rest on her features for weeks.

About a year ago the father of Miss Titus died, leaving his family well off in this world's goods, and Mrs. J. H. Titus removed to the pretty little village of Pepperell, in the State of Massachusetts, about thirty miles distant from Boston, where a son-in-law of hers, the Rev. Wm. F. Walton, resided. Mrs. Titus had two other daughters—one married to Mr. Galloway, a retired iron merchant, and the other, a Mrs. Samuel P. Lewis, whose home is in Oil City, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Lewis had been spending the winter months in Richmond, Va., with friends, and Mrs. Gertrude Galloway was boarding in the fashionable boarding house of Mrs. Adams, 38 West Twenty-fourth street, in a fine brown stone house situated on the south side of the street, near Sixth avenue. Mrs. Galloway occupied finely furnished apartments, and some days ago Mrs. Adams was invited to come and stay at Mrs. Galloway's, which the latter lady did. About a month ago Miss Isabella Titus, who had left the convent at the time of her father's death, and who was now grown to be a fully developed and beautiful girl of eighteen years, was invited also to visit her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Galloway, at her boarding house, No. 38 West Twenty-fourth street. Miss Isabella came and was the joy and life of the house, rendering every one happy by her cheerful flow of spirits.

The rear apartment on the second floor of the house is occupied by a physician's consulting office, and Dr. J. P. Pratt, a room on the fourth floor, was occupied by Miss Isabella as a sleeping apartment, and neither the young lady repaired every evening at an early hour.

During the last three or four weeks it was noticed by her sisters, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Galloway, and by her father, Mr. Walton, that she was suffering from a peculiar ailment, which she would not talk to herself and her relations in a despondent and sad manner. The poor girl was very full-blooded, and the slightest ailment would exercise on her part sent the blood to her face with the speed of lightning.

While at the boarding house, Miss Isabella Titus had made the acquaintance of a young gentleman, who made her a present of a Smith & Wesson four-chambered revolver as a token of his appreciation of the kind and pleasant acquaintance. The young lady used to fire at a target with the pistol, which she prized very highly, and when she was alone in her room, she would take it out and talk to herself and her relations in a despondent and sad manner. The poor girl was very full-blooded, and the slightest ailment would exercise on her part sent the blood to her face with the speed of lightning.

When the two ladies reached Broadway Mrs. Galloway noticed that Isabella was looking very pale, and that she was suffering from a peculiar ailment, which she would not talk to herself and her relations in a despondent and sad manner. The poor girl was very full-blooded, and the slightest ailment would exercise on her part sent the blood to her face with the speed of lightning.

"Do you not feel, Isabella, you will ruin it if you don't?"

"Never mind, Gertrude; I shall never want it again," answered Isabella, with a merry laugh, and then she turned to her sister, and said, "I shall never want it again, but I shall keep it as a memento of my father's gift."

Miss Isabella seemed much depressed and downcast, and her sisters in a loving way tried to rally her, but they could not shake the melancholy gloom from her beautiful features.

About seven o'clock on Thursday evening, after dinner had been cleared away, Mrs. Galloway was sitting in her room, and was passing the door of Miss Isabella's chamber she listened and fancied that she heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in the rear of the second floor. While standing directly opposite the door of Miss Isabella's chamber he listened and fancied that he heard the clicking of a pistol, as if some person was trying to load a revolver on the stairs. She thought it was a dream, and went to bed, but when she awoke in the morning she found that she had been sitting up all night, and that she had been firing the pistol.

"No, that cannot be, as she has nothing to load it with," I don't believe she has any cartridges whatever.

During Thursday evening different friends called at the residence of Mrs. Adams, and the time was spent very pleasantly by all, and Mrs. Adams came down stairs in full evening dress and helped to entertain the company, out of a shade of unhappiness rested on her face, and she seemed very much preoccupied, and her thoughts were, to all intents and purposes, a thousand miles away from the parlor in which she sat.

At half-past eight Miss Isabella, looking as charming as a vision, left the parlor to go up stairs, bidding good night to all, leaving a gentleman, who had remained, to be entertained by another lady. When she reached a few minutes later, she descended to the basement to bid her sister Mrs. Lewis, good night, and then she went up stairs to her chamber, on the fourth floor, and at this time the poor girl's brain must have been filled with the disconcerting of impatient madness, as what remains to be told will show.

At a quarter to eleven o'clock Dr. Pratt and another gentleman came in and they both passed into the office of the former, in